

Life Skills Programme Details

Life Skills is a social competence training course combined with an innovation competition.

The Life Skills programme comprises two parts:

- a theoretical part
- a practical part

The theoretical part involves 25 lessons during which teachers will train the students in the aforementioned competences (life skills).

In the practical part the students will carry out projects prepared earlier, working in groups under the teachers' supervision.

The innovation competition is an integral part of the programme.

In its first stage, the students will work on their projects. These may be completely new ideas or modifications of existing technical projects. Also, they may be related to any area of life and don't have to be limited to the framework defined by a given school's profile.

In the competition's second stage, selected groups will present their projects to a jury made up of entrepreneurs, prospective employers, and representatives of the education sector.
